

Schroeder House

30. Schroeder House,
5524 Dyke Street

Brookfield, which included the east end of what is now Onekama, was platted in 1880 by John Schroeder, one of the Channel diggers. Schroeder produced brick as well as tile from local clay and was cited as being the largest shipper at this port in 1871. After the grist mill of John Schroeder had been removed from the northeast corner of Dyke and First Streets in Onekama, a lawn with a fountain eventually swept all of the way from the corner to the large frame Schroeder dwelling that was owned by John's son, Adolph. The tower of this house had a mansard roof originally. This residence was later occupied by the John Dolansky family.

Another
View of Schroeder
House
Showing
Specht
House at Right

